

Dr. Tammy C. James joined the Department of Health in 1994. She received her PH.D., from Kent State University in Curriculum and Instruction and Health Education. She currently teaches courses related to Coordinated School Health Programs, Elementary Health Methods, and Violence Prevention both at the undergraduate and graduate level. In addition, beginning in the spring of 2011, she will be teaching a Lifeskills course for first year student athletes. Dr. James continues to work at the national, state and local level providing professional development to school district staff on the implementation of Coordinated School Health Programs.