Service-Learning & Volunteer Programs
West Chester University
Annual Report 2016-2017
LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR

I am proud to report that community engagement flourished at West Chester University during the 2016-17 academic year. Exciting changes in university leadership spurred new developments for the department. Our recently inaugurated 15th President, Dr. Christopher Fiorentino, has already committed to adding community engagement to his Presidential Toolkit, as well as participating in the reclassification process for the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching’s Community Engagement designation. WCU is currently counted among the small number of colleges nationwide with this accolade.

The Office of Service-Learning and Volunteer Programs (SLVP) accomplished several goals set out by the university’s strategic plan, Building on Excellence. We expanded our support of academic service-learning, helping the university exceed its strategic goal with an 8.5% increase in service-learning course sections offered to students. We also widened our global perspective, developing international service-learning programs with the support of a new Assistant Director of Service-Learning Abroad. With more than 300 community partners, we continue to be a hub for connecting non-profits and government agencies with the university.

In late September SLVP grew in a new direction with the opening of the Resource Pantry. This exciting new initiative, established in collaboration with the Financial Aid Office, helps eliminate barriers to degree completion for low-income students by providing basic necessities, such as food and personal care items to students. Educational programming is also offered to help build the self-sufficiency needed to be successful after college.

The November elections also presented a unique opportunity for SLVP to promote voter engagement on campus. Through partnerships with faculty, staff, and student and community organizations, we focused on increasing voter registration and turnout while educating students on civic responsibility. Our efforts resulted in WCU being designated a “Voter Friendly Campus” by the Campus Vote Project and NASPA, along with only 83 universities nationwide.

In April, assessment data started rolling in and it became evident that SLVP programming and service-learning courses played an important role in deepening students’ understanding of social problems, encouraging them to be reflective thinkers, and setting them on a life long path of active citizenship.

It is an exciting time at WCU, and I am grateful to work with so many committed faculty, inspiring community organizations, and eager students, all collaborating to make a difference in our communities.

The Office of Service-Learning and Volunteer Programs aims to expand opportunities for service-learning across disciplines and colleges. Through workshops and consultations, Director Jodi Roth-Saks and Service-Learning Faculty Associate Dr. Liz Wang were able to cultivate new relationships with faculty interested in community-based teaching.

West Chester University defines academic service-learning as a teaching method that combines community service with curricular goals, as it focuses on critical, reflective thinking and civic responsibility.

The Community Engagement Scholars Program plays an important role in assisting faculty with bringing community engagement projects to fruition. Within the program, faculty have the option of partnering with student leaders and community partners to create a new service-learning project, support a community-based research project or assist a department with creating new partnerships for field placements, internships or applied learning experiences. This year, ten Community Engagement Scholars partnered with eight faculty and over 30 community organizations, including Chester County Food Bank, People’s Light & Theatre and Home of the Sparrow. One Community Engagement Scholar shared:

“This program has helped me to really understand the concept of active citizenship and learn what steps need to be taken in order to become an active citizen. The program also helped me to develop my leadership skills, make connections, help students with their projects, enhance my communication skills, and help to make a difference within the community.”

With the assistance of the Service-Learning Faculty Work Group, Dr. Wang advocated for the institutionalization of service-learning courses through the creation of a “C” course designation, as well as a certificate program in Community Engagement. The new general education reform process has provided an opportunity for a pathway to be created for students interested in becoming civic leaders through community-based learning.

Additionally, this growing field in higher education has sparked the interest of many faculty at WCU. The May 24, 2017 conference, Learning Transformed: Out of the Classroom and Into the Community, hosted by the Committee for Excellence in Learning and Teaching (CELT) and the Service-Learning Faculty Work Group, had 47 registered faculty from 22 disciplines and nine staff. During this workshop faculty explored service-learning as a high-impact educational practice. Dr. Char Gray, Executive Director of PA Campus Compact, provided principles for designing a service-learning course, tips for practical application, and methods for creating course learning assessments. Faculty also heard from a panel of WCU faculty who are currently teaching service-learning courses and enjoyed lunch with representatives from local community organizations. Afternoon sessions focused on ethical global engagement and combining teaching, research, and scholarship through community engagement.
Resource Pantry

WCU currently enrolls more than 3,900 Pell-eligible students, including more than 30 unaccompanied homeless youth who do not have a home to return to during school closures. As a response to the need on campus, staff from the Office of Financial Aid and the Office of Service-Learning and Volunteer Programs began a collaboration which resulted in the opening of a Resource Pantry on September 28, 2016.

The Pantry aims to eliminate barriers to degree completion for students with financial need by providing basic necessities, while assisting students to build the self-sufficiency needed to be successful after college. Currently located on the 2nd floor of the Lawrence Center, the Pantry’s small, inviting space offers non-perishable food, fruits and vegetables from the South Campus Garden, personal care items, school supplies, as well as business and winter attire. The Pantry is open to all students in need, to which most are referred by faculty and staff.

This initiative was made possible by the Division of Student Affairs, a WCU University Forum grant, the Corporation for National and Community Service, Pennsylvania Campus Compact, Chester County Food Bank, WCU Undergraduate Studies and Student Support Services, Department of Nutrition as well as a generous donation from Dave and Pat Holvecks’ Lightening the Load Foundation. Several of these partners joined the newly formed Advisory Board, which includes faculty, staff, students, alumni and community organizations.

From October 2016 to May 2017, use of the Pantry grew exponentially due to social media, weekly newsletters, referrals, and a poster campaign led by the Graduate Social Work Intern, Ellie Gerhardt, and the SLVP Graduate Assistant, Caitlin Silver. These efforts, in conjunction with media attention from The Philadelphia Inquirer and CBS News, helped raise visibility of the Pantry outside of the campus community.

The Pantry also offered programming for students, including informal dinners hosted by Aramark, which were designed to create a sense of community and decrease the stigma associated with financial hardship. Students also were encouraged to participate in multiple financial literacy programs and a business attire shopping trip to Wings for Success.

This year, the Pantry served 47 students and distributed 1,300 pounds of food. 82 generous individuals donated food, clothing and/or school supplies to the pantry, while several additional drives were hosted by APSCUF, Staff Appreciation Day, Fraternity and Sorority Life, and WCU Presidential Inauguration Committee. After a strong start, the Resource Pantry looks forward to engaging more students who need support, and expanding programs and services in the years to come.
America Reads Youth Mentoring Program

The roots of this WCU program can be traced back to the America Reads Challenge, a national literacy campaign started by the Clinton administration in 1996. Supporting the efforts of teachers and parents, the program envisioned a “citizen army” of volunteer tutors helping to ensure that every child in the U.S. could read independently by the third grade. The Department of Education’s Federal Work-Study Program for higher education provided funding for 3,400 colleges to hire America Reads tutors, guided by staff mentors. WCU joined the program early on and in 2012, a new joint oversight structure by Office of Financial Aid and SLVP allowed for the expansion of the program and better retention rates.

Today, the America Reads Youth Mentoring Program provides WCU students with the opportunity to mentor youth in Chester County through a variety of community partnerships, ranging from childcare centers to in-school academic intervention programs. Current community partners include: the Melton Center: New Directions, St. Agnes Outreach Services, West Chester Area Day Care Center, the YMCA’s Believe and Achieve program and Childcare Early Learning Center, and Henderson High School’s Academic Intervention Program.

In the 2016-17 school year, more than 30 Federal Work-Study students served as tutors and mentors to over 400 youth in our partnering community programs, accruing more than 4,000 community service hours. In turn, WCU students participated in regular para-professional workshops on topics such as communication, teamwork, and professionalism, presented in collaboration with the Twardowski Career Development Center, LGBTQA Services, the Center for Women and Gender Equity, and the LARC. The growth and sustainability of the program was assessed each semester through advisory board council meetings with partnering program managers.

America Reads Mentor:
“I have grown by learning new cultural values and ethnic backgrounds and how important the first ten years are for the child. I have learned that my impact on their lives will change who they will be in the future. I need to be positive and support them when things get hard because they are going through things that I may not know or understand.”

Community Partner:
“We view our America Reads students as a valuable resource, providing one-on-one literacy support, encouraging English language acquisition and confidence and building relationships which will promote goals in higher education in this most vulnerable population of preschool-aged children.”

--Lisa Bice, St. Agnes Outreach Services
Alternative Spring Break

The Alternative Break program immerses students in meaningful, short term service trips across the globe during breaks in the academic year. Organized by student leaders, each trip aims to introduce participants to new communities, where they work alongside local residents to address pressing social issues. Students who participate in the program engage in pre-departure meetings, as well as reflection activities that lead to a greater understanding of the social problem being addressed.

Philadelphia, PA

Sustainable Food Resources in Urban Communities
Eleven students traveled to Philadelphia to serve with the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society where they explored connections between areas of poverty and urban food deserts by learning about community gardens and growing seedlings in neighborhood-based greenhouses.

HIV/AIDS Education within the LGBTQ Community
Ten students participated in a community prevention program and advocated for the LGBTQ community affected by HIV/AIDS. Students volunteered with the Pittsburgh AIDS Task Force and Gay & Lesbian Community Center.

New York City

Youth Education and Financial Literacy
Seven students volunteered with Junior Achievement of NY, where they engaged pre-K -12th grade children in academic enrichment activities to develop financial literacy, entrepreneurship, and leadership skills through interactive games and teamwork activities.

Roanoke, VA

Affordable Housing and Homelessness
Nine students volunteered with Renovation Alliance and Feeding America to help provide affordable housing for those affected by rural poverty. They explored issues of affordable housing and generational poverty.

Ventanilla, Perú

Youth and Community Development
Fourteen students traveled to Ventanilla, Perú to serve with Voices4Perú during spring break. Students renovated a house for a single mom with 5 children and ran a one-day sports camp for local youth. They also fundraised $2,075 in donations for the organization, and collected 20 suitcases of donated supplies (clothing, shoes, sports equipment, first aid kits, vitamins, toys, books, and art supplies).
Alternative Breaks

Student Participant, HIV/AIDS Education within the LGBTQ Community

“My most valuable experience was reflection time with my group members. Sharing our stories, establishing a comfortable, safe space, and empowering each other, we became a family. As someone who identifies as an LGBT member of color, this trip had special value to me. It was heart-warming seeing that the trip was also valuable to other members.”

International Service-Learning

SLVP supports faculty members in the integration of service-learning activities with faculty-led study abroad programs. These programs help advance the University's Strategic Goals around the theme of Engagement, which include "Encourage and provide support for expanded field-based and service learning opportunities." (1.3A) and "Prepare students to be global citizens." (1.6E). This year, to increase coordination between SLVP and the Center for International Programs, we hired a new Assistant Director of Service-Learning Abroad, who provided support to faculty in the planning and implementation of 3 winter break programs in Honduras, Peru, and Ecuador, as well as two upcoming summer 2017 programs in the Dominican Republic and China.

The new Assistant Director of Service-Learning supports faculty in planning international service-learning initiatives by:

- Finding and evaluating community partners
- Providing guidance on program design
- Advising on best practices
- Identifying and training student leaders
- Introducing students and faculty to ethical volunteering practices
- Obtaining clearances for working with minors

Voter Engagement

The November elections presented a unique opportunity for SLVP to engage the campus in the political process. Through partnerships with faculty, staff, and student and community organizations, our campus-wide initiative aimed to significantly increase voter registration and turnout while educating students on civic responsibility. Our efforts resulted in WCU being designated a “Voter Friendly Campus” by the Campus Vote Project and NASPA, along with 83 other universities and colleges nationwide.

Director Jodi Roth-Saks, Political Science faculty Dr. Chris Stangl, and two students, Ellie Sullum and Aileen Assumma, led our campus-wide voter engagement efforts. Both students served as Campus Election Engagement Project (CEEP) Fellows, funded either through a partnership with the national non-partisan organization CEEP or the Office of Financial Aid Federal Work Study program.

Together, Ellie and Aileen designed a comprehensive strategy for campus outreach, including:

- Digital ads, flyers, social media posts, videos and dining hall advertisements
- Presentations to ~2,000 incoming students at New Student Orientation
- An all-day voter registration drive on National Voter Registration Day
- A nonpartisan issues forum with the Graduate Student Association, Lambda Alpha Upsilon Fraternity, and the Latino American Student Organization
- “Donut Forget to Vote”, a polling location reminder right before the election
  Transportation to an off campus polling location and free precinct maps
- “Know Before You Go”, a nonpartisan panel discussion with 5 faculty from various departments analyzing each candidate's position on reproductive rights, family leave, LGBTQ+ rights, pay equity, and affordable tuition (co-hosted with the Center for Women and Gender Equity and the Departments of Political Science, English, Women's and Gender Studies, and Graduate Social Work)
- Assistance for students and community members at our campus polling location
- "How to Run for Office," a post-election panel discussion with Downingtown Mayor Josh Maxwell, PA State Representative Carolyn Comitta, West Chester Ward 5 Judge of Elections John Young, and Chester County League of Women Voters representative Tam Williams
Community Service Retreat
Each semester, SLVP offers a half-day Community Service Retreat for student leaders of campus organizations looking to deepen their group’s community engagement. This interactive workshop equips students with practical tools for transforming charity-based initiatives into service-learning projects. They discovered ways to incorporate meaningful service into their membership experience, collaborate with other campus organizations, identify causes and non-profit organizations related to their organization’s values and mission, incorporate reflection before and after service, and much more. This year, nearly 40 student leaders representing 25-30 service-based clubs, Greek-letter organizations, religious groups, and athletic teams came together to learn and grow. The impact of this learning persists well beyond the retreat itself. For example, leaders of Alpha Phi Omega (APO) shared that they have been incorporating reflection discussions about recent service experiences into each chapter meeting. In April, APO amended their bylaws to require weekly structured reflections, formalizing their commitment to best practices in service-learning.

MLK Day of Service
Martin Luther King, Jr. Day was observed nationally on Monday, January 16, but in keeping with recent university tradition, WCU postponed our celebration of Dr. King’s life until Thursday, January 26, when students had returned to campus for the spring semester. The university honored his values and accomplishments through a variety of events, including an annual service project sponsored by SLVP. All members of the university community were invited to help create “no-sew” fleece blankets to benefit children in the West Chester region. Our office partnered with 3 local non-profit organizations who distributed the blankets: Fleece for Keeps, Nemours A.I. duPont Hospital for Children, and the Abramson Cancer Center at Chester County Hospital.
Co-curricular Programs

Adopt-A-Block
Through the Adopt-A-Block program, WCU students work to keep the Borough of West Chester free of debris and garbage. Student groups visit their assigned areas once or twice a month to clean up trash and beautify the community. During the 2016-2017 academic year, 41 blocks were adopted by students representing 60 different clubs and organizations.

Volunteer Fair
Each semester, SLVP hosts over 50 community partners at the Volunteer Fair to network, recruit student volunteers, and educate students about community needs. This is an excellent opportunity for students to discover new service opportunities that align with their academic, personal, and professional interests.

Move Out Food Drive
The WCU Move Out Food Drive gave students the opportunity to donate non-perishable food items during the final two weeks of the academic year as they moved out of their residence halls. In partnership with University Student Housing & Residence Life and Housing Services, we collected 2,686 pounds of non-perishable food items for the Chester County Food Bank and the WCU Resource Pantry.

Play4Kay
This cross-departmental collaboration between SLVP and the Department of Athletics helps to to raise money for the Kay Yow Cancer Fund, whose mission is to extend and improve the lives of all women battling cancer. During the annual "Pink Out" basketball game, SLVP sponsors a "Pink Zone" area where patrons can purchase Play4Kay t-shirts, snacks, and raffle tickets for donated gift baskets. A special appearance by our mascot Rammy, as well as enthusiastic volunteers from Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, Colleges Against Cancer, and the Friars Society, helped keep spirits high. Play4Kay 2017 raised $2700 for the Kay Yow Cancer Fund.

SOAR: New Student Leadership Retreat
SOAR is a two-day retreat for first-year and transfer students. Sponsored by Student Leadership and Involvement, New Student Programs, Student Services, Inc., the Center for Women and Gender Equity, the Career Development Center, and SLVP, the retreat focuses on educating students about leadership and service. This year's retreat engaged 78 students in an afternoon of service at 5 different community partners: the Friends Association, the Melton Center, the ARC of Chester County, Chester County Food Bank, and Friends of Everhart Park. After volunteering, students engaged in small and large group reflection, considering why service matters during their time at WCU. In a post-retreat assessment, 92% of students indicated they would participate in community service opportunities during the academic year and 96% of participants have developed an understanding of active citizenship.
Awards and Honors

PASSHE Board of Governors Student Spotlight
On January 26, faculty and student participants in two of our winter break international service-learning programs had the opportunity to showcase their experiences in a presentation to the PASSHE Board of Governors. Director Jodi Roth-Saks, along with faculty members Dr. Joanne Christaldi (Nutrition) and Dr. Michael Antonio (Criminal Justice) traveled to Harrisburg with five students, where they shared information about the "Nutrition Assessment, Education, and Service in Honduras" and "Criminal Justice and Voices4Peru" programs, including details about the students and community impact.

Outstanding Public Service Award Recipients
Aileen Assumma, English Major, Youth Empowerment and Urban Studies Minor
Through her position as Vice President for Service with Alpha Phi Omega and her leadership in the Campus Election Engagement Project, she demonstrated outstanding commitment to empowering her peers to make a difference.

Allison Cox, English Major
As a Site Leader at Henderson High School for the America Reads program, she empowered high school students to set and achieve their academic goals, equipping them with the resources and work habits necessary to succeed.

Ellie Sullum, Philosophy Major, Peace and Conflict Studies Minor
In her volunteer work for civil rights organizations and her leadership as a Campus Election Engagement Program Fellow, Ellie motivated her peers and elevated the level of civic engagement on the WCU campus.

Service-Learning Teaching Excellence Award
On May 24, Dr. Andrea Varrichio of the Department of Language and Cultures was recognized with the Service-Learning Teaching Excellence Award in recognition of her achievements in developing, implementing, and sustaining academic service-learning opportunities for WCU students. Dr. Varrichio has developed and facilitated five different service-learning courses involving partnerships with nine community organizations. Angela Della Valle, Department Head of Upper Merion Area Middles School's English as a Second Language Program, wrote in a letter of reference that the students’ “services and supports... have resulted in great educational gains for our limited English proficient students, as well as...100% parent participation in parent/teacher conferences for the past 5 years!”

AAUW Gateway to Equity Award
On May 10, 2017 Director Jodi Roth-Saks and Assistant Director of Financial Aid, Tori Nuccio accepted the West Chester/Chester County Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW) Gateway to Equity Award on behalf of the Resource Pantry. The award was in recognition of the achievements being made to better support homeless and disadvantaged students at WCU. After the formal remarks, the recipients gave a presentation to the AAUW about the many achievements of the Resource Pantry.
